I have an object, call it A. I want to make a method that takes an object as an argument. Is it possible to pass the name of the property to use as the parameter? For example: class A: def __init__(self, name): self.name = name def change_name(self, prop): self.name = prop a = A('bill') a.change_name('bill') When I do this I get an error: TypeError: change_name() takes no arguments (1 given) I know I can use a dictionary, but I was hoping for something that didn't require a second layer of indirection to get the desired behavior. A: I am using property to define the object's own attribute name. def change_name(self, prop): setattr(self, prop, None) #ifndef __KEYBIND_H__ #define __KEYBIND_H__ #include "base/types.h" // Windows API #include "base/win/defs.h" #ifndef WIN32 // Win32 API #ifndef UNICODE #include "windows/types.h" #else #define COORD LPCOORD #define COORD_INT64 LPCO

CalSync Registration Code [March-2022]

CalSync is a lightweight Windows application built specifically for helping you synchronize your Lotus Notes Calendar to your Google Calendar. Since this is a portable program, it is important to mention that it doesn't leave any traces in the Windows Registry. You can copy it on any USB flash drive or other devices, and take it with you whenever you need to perform synchronization operations on the fly. CalSync boasts a clean and straightforward layout that allows users to perform most operations with just a few clicks. In order to carry out the synchronization operation, you need to provide details about your Google and Lotus Notes accounts (usernames and passwords). What's more, the tool enables you to manually configure a synchronization session, or let the application perform automatic operations at a specified time. Other important features worth mentioning are represented by the possibility to make the program save the passwords and automatically sign in, start synchronizing data immediately after login, and save the current settings in the tool's folder or user profile. Last but not least, you can specify your default Google and Lotus Notes Account, schedule the synchronization process, configure privacy settings, as well as set up the reminder parameters. The app also keeps a log with details about the entire process which can be copied to the Clipboard. During our testing we have noticed that CalSync carries out a task quickly and without errors throughout the entire process. It manages to remain light on the system resources, so it doesn't hamper the overall performance of the computer. All things considered, CalSync offers a handy set of parameters and intuitive environment for helping you synchronize data efficiently, and is suitable for beginners and professionals alike.
