The combat has a nice unique feel, the story is gripping, the characters are well thought out, and the setting is surprisingly interesting. What I really liked, however, was the fact that the developers were not afraid of going all out, and they forwent a "safe" adventure and, instead, threw me into a game that challenges my expectations in ways that were fun and surprising. While this is fantasy combat at its best, it is definitely not your father's melee combat. If you played the first Diablo on your first play through, you're already familiar with what is in store for your expectations. If not, then this game will be exactly what you're looking for. The combat in this game will test your skills with a challenging and fast paced system. Not to mention, though, the loot/drop system is still fantastic and encourages you to customize your characters as you would in any RPG. This game will keep you returning and, because of that, it's a perfect game for a holiday gift. I'd recommend this game to almost anyone.
